Random Acts of Kindness Week

Kindness is magical. We hope you engage in the magical type of RAK. Yes, picking up a pencil for a friend who dropped it is nice, but magical RAK means something more. Do you know a student who is having trouble making friends, understanding math, or who is just feeling sad? These are the kids who need you. Can you think of a magical way to make their lives better? Stretch your thinking and search your heart. Try to go beyond the usual, casual kindness. Find a way to make your RAK magical. For certain, someone will notice. You can inspire others with your actions. Someone may even write a card about you. From now until Valentine's Day, open your minds, be generous with your kind-heartedness. At the end of this week, see how you feel. Is the world a better place? If it is, it's because of you.
